With Men on Bases, Ten Being Left.

Mobile Bay was refought this afternoon a second Speaker. in a dry and slightly profane setting on the shores of that celebrated body of the shores of that celebrated body of water. When it was all over it was found that Coxy Dolan and George Kelly of the Giants, as well as Edward Lauzon, who calls himself an umpire, had been arrested by the local constabulary and that Lauzon carried a cute little "mouse" over his left eye.

The battle, which was staged mainly between Dolan, who was coaching at first base, and Lauzon, who was the umpire on the paths, was by far the most exciting and interesting feature of a baseball game in which the Athletics, with the malign assistance of the alleged umpire, defeated the Giants by 1 to 2.

leged umpire, defeated the Glants by 1 to 2.

For a while it looked as if the fight, which came immediately after the third inning, would have serious developments as Lauzon drew an open knife and made for both Dolan and Kelly. However, other members of the New York aquad intervened and discouraged any knife play on the part of the bold, bad umpire, who hails from the Western League and spends his winters as a stevedore on the Mobile docks.

The climax of Lauzon's work came when he declared Monroe out at first base to end the third inning. Monroe hit a hard one to deep short and Shannon made the stop none too cleanly and the return to first none too fast. Monroe beat the throw by a stride but Lauzon waved him out.

"You're Blind," Opines Dolan.

"Say, you are as blind as a bat," Dolan opined in thunderous tones in the direction of Lauzon, adding various trimmings which were not audible

One word led to another and all of a sudden Lauzon led his left for Dolan's jaw. Cozy had not been watching the boxing bouts up in Milwaukee all winter for nothing As quick as a fash he countered with a right to the eye and whipped his left to the wind. The stevedore staggered, but, quickly recovering, whipped out an open knife and dived for Dolan and Kelly, who by this time had taken at least a verbal part in the doings.

By this time also the ball park chapter of the Mobile Police Department had rushed out on the field four strong. Lauzon struggied to get in a cutting blow and Dolan fought to land another smash.

John McGraw also ran out of the Glants' dugout and told Lauzon what he thought of his umpiring and his pulling of an open knife. The police then decided that Dolan, Kelly and Lauzon would have to be arrested.

Dolan was taken to the police court, where he had a bond put up, but Kelly was allowed to play through the game. Lauzon was permitted to stay in the park, but McGraw wouldn't allow him te continue as umpire. Walter Gavin, first baseman of the Mobiles, was pressed into service as a substitute.

To-night Dolan and Lauzon got orders to show up to-morrow morning for trial, but it looks as if the charge against Kelly will be dropped.

Umpire Costs Glants Game.

Lauzon's raw decisions cost the Giants the game. That he was belligerent he showed in the second inning, when he started a punch for Frisch, who had disputed one of his many verdicts.

In the first inning Witt beat out a hit to Young, but Tilly Walker hit into a double play. Lauzon called both men safe, and the Athletics guffawed, while the Giants gnashed their teeth.

WALTER TRUMBULL Copyright, 1921, by The New York Herald

If you would pay an income tax, This simple rule obey:
Go dope the pennant races out—
Then bet the other way.

THEY'RE SLIDING HOME.

Just about a week from to-day the fans in various big league villages will quit bragging about what their favorite team is going to accomplish and hustle out to the parks, where they will have their first chance to criticise

A little later on they will criticise the old players, the manager, the umpires, the owners, the bat boy and the ground keeper.

During the winter and early spring the rabid rooter is an optimist. He explains away the mistakes of the home team. He bit erly resents an insinuation that any player on it is inferior to any outsider playing the same position. He even will give you an argument about some outfielder who covers less ground than a fence post, needing only experience to make him

But in the late spring and summer the rooter's nature undergoes a change. Let the home team drop a couple of games, and the man who supported it during the winter as the ocean supports a life preserver now lends it the same degree of aid that a bridge of cobwebs might afford an elephant. There is no player on the team who could suit him, even if he were descended from a line that had been in the suit business for generations.

From the grandstand the rooter plays differently for opposing batters, never strikes at bad balls and never makes mental or manual errors. If the home team wins he and the manager agree on the pitcher, the pinch hitter and the strategy of the game. If it loses, the manager is a fat head whose judgment is on a par with that of a man with an itching foot who endeavors to scratch it by holding it against a buzz saw in action.

The stand is always so much the best place from which to ruh a game that we wonder that the managers do not always sit there instead of on the bench. Of course, when they have too protracted an argument with an umpire they do. Thus an umpire may be a blessing in disguise, although the dis-

There is little to chose between the volubility and endurance powers of a golf grasshopper and a baseball bug. The only difference is that the golfer explains about his own game, while the fan demonstrates how much better he could have played the other fellow's game,

THE ADVANCE DOPE.

Every New Yorker is convinced that this is to be the long awaited year when the Giants and Yankees will meet in a world's series. Such a thing is not beyond the bounds of probability. Both McGraw and Huggins have strong outfits, and if they get the breaks they may come through.

Needless to say, we are not referring to the breaks in wrists and ankle bones, which appear to have been somewhat prevalent lately, but the breaks in luck. In the course of a number of seasons the element known as luck probably evens up, but it is foolish to say that it always evens up in the space of one season. It does not.

According to reports from the South practically every team is strengthened, with the exception of the White Sox. We cannot see where the Red Sox have strengthened, and Evers is building up a new team in Chicago, but the news from all of these camps has been strongly optimistic in tone. If it is true that the second division clubs are stronger than they were it certainly will improve the races and add to the interest.

THE REAL REASON.

It's now that many poets sing
Their piping notes in praise of spring.
They warble of the leaves and flowers
And sprouting grass and falling showers;
But few of them, it would appear. Know why we're glad that spring is here They only seem to know we sigh For April to come tripping by, And never stop to think the reason is that it brings the baseball season.
